NEWS of the WEEK

The "Queen" Arrives
New York City--The "Queen
Mary" of the Cunard-White Star line, most powerful steamship boat, completed her maiden voyage westward in 4 days, 12 hours, 5 minutes, about an hour more than the record of the French liner Normandie, holder of the transatlantic blue ribbon. Officials indicate that when broken in she will capture the ocean speed record
from her French rival.

Large Government Loan
Washington, D. C. -- The Treasury's offering of $2,050,754,000 in bonds is the largest ever made in peace time, and part of it is at the lowest interest rate (13-8%) ever set for such security. A billion of the loan is "new money," to finance veterans' bonus payments on June 5th, and increased the national debt to more than 32 billions. The remainder of $1,050,754,000 is for refunding maturing obligations.

Shift in Labor Ranks
Washington, D. C. -- The flat refusal of the Committee for Industrial Organization, under the leadership of John L. Lewis, of the United Mine Workers, to disband, as demanded by President William Green
of the American Federation of Labor, threatens the existence of the after organization. Of its 3,024,000 members, 1,144,000 support the CIO policies of organization by large industries. Green's AFL wants smaller units of craft workers organized according to types of labor.

CORPORATION GETS NOWHERE AT SPECIAL MEETING

The special Corporation meeting held Monday evening at the Upper Hose House was at various times far from the nth degree. It was the consensus of opinion that the Corporation should improve its equipment. It was pointed out by Fred Merrill that the business men could not be expected to man equipment for out of the village fires. It was the desire of the meeting to cooperate with the Town--but nobody knew or could say what the Town will vote to do. A splendid example of trying to "put the cart before the horse." As one person remarked, the Corporation wasn't taking "a pig in a bag." They wanted to see the color of the pig.

Mr. Hanscom's well-modulated voice had scarcely ceased echoing from the hose cart after reading the warrant and swearing Atty Gerard Williams in as moderator, when things started hay-wire. The Corporation committee reported that the carts should be put on lower wheels, and the report was accepted. The third and fourth articles were pushed to sixth and seventh places and the Corporation proceeded to get all tangled up in that much-criticized article five: "To see if the Corporation will vote to accept any equipment which the Town may buy, etc., etc."

Marshall Hastings moved to accept it. There was nothing specific to accept! An inter-motion drew Robert Hastings, East Bethel member of the Town committee on fire protection, into saying that the article was inserted to see if the Corporation would house Town equipment. It was thought the Corporation would! Back to Marshall's motion it was defeated. Nothing further could be done under Article Five.
Others on their feet during debate included Fred Merrill, Herbert R.
Rowe, Ernest Luxton, George Har-
low, Al Van and Mr. Bishop.

Reverse to Article Three: The Corporation committee made three or four recommendations to improve equipment ranging from $200 to put small rubber-tired carts on the present carts, to $300 for a commercial fire fighting apparatus.
The one most talked was a front end pumper on a light truck. The committee was requested to make a definite report. Fred Merrill moved the meeting adjourn subject to call both the report and any amount vote were lost in a web of parliamentary law.

Most everybody was getting excited, confused and a bit puffed
when Charles Hathrop made a motion to adjourn until after the operational Town meeting decides what the Town is going to do about fire protection. Then the Corporation will decide and make necessary improvements in its equipment.

THE BLUE GHOST

ECONOMIC HIGHLIGHTS

Happenings That Affect the Dinner
Pails, Dividend Checks and Tax Bills of Every Individual. National and International Problems
Inseparable from Local Welfare.

A little less than a year ago, a committee of the House of Representatives was considering a bill which had the strong support of the Administration, but which was regarded as unconstitutional by many congressional lawyers of both parties. Committee members also favored the bill—but the constitutional question made them
hesitate to recommend its passage.
So President Roosevelt sent the committee a brief note which was to make headlines throughout the country: "All doubts should be resolved in favor of the bill, leaving to the courts, in an orderly fashion,
the ultimate question of constitutionality.... I hope your committee will not permit doubt as to constitutionality, however reasonable, to block the suggested legislation."

That note stirred up one of the liveliest debates in the New Deal's history. Friends of the Administration said that the President had shown a sensible and logical attitude—that it was up to the courts,
not a group of congressmen, to decide whether or not a law is constitutional. Opponents said that the note made it apparent that the President was seeking to circumvent the basic law of the land.

The bill was the Guffey Act, designed to stabilize the long chaotic bituminous coal industry. In effect it created "a little NRA" with sweeping powers over this industry. It had hardly passed both houses of congress and received the Presidential signature before court action was started. Slowly it wended its way through lower courts, with fair success. Federal jurists seemed to think that, after all, it was a constitutional law.
Then, a few weeks ago, the Supreme Court spoke the final word.
The Guffey Act was unconstitutional.

However, the High Court's decision did not entirely blast the hopes of friends of this type of legislation, and it did bring to the fore
some interesting possibilities.

The Act imposed a tax of 15% on all the bituminous coal mined in the country—with the provision that operators who complied with the code defined in the Act would get 50% of the tax back while those who did not comply with the code would get nothing back. The Supreme Court, in a 5-4 decision, read by Justice Sutherland held that this was not a real tax of all but a penalty, and was illegal.

Thus, there seems little chance that Congress will be able to create valid legislation to control an industry's labor policy unless this industry is beyond doubt in exercise commerce) or to use the power to tax to destroy elements within an industry which refuses to abide by Congressional strictures.

However, the Act also contained another vital provision—it allowed a National Bituminous Coal Commission appointed by the President to fix minimum prices at which coal may be sold. And on this phase of the law, the High Court was much less definite.

The majority decision did not pass on the constitutionality of price-fixing. It simply said that inasmuch as all provisions of the Act
were, in its opinion, inseparable, all must fall together if one were found invalid. The minority decision, read by Justice Cardozo and approved by Justices Brandeis and Stone, regarded price-fixing as legal and a third lone decision, read by Chief Justice Hughes, dissented from the majority decision—with which he agreed on other phases of the Act—on the grounds that the various parts of the Act were separable, and that consideration of price-fixing was premature.

Uphat of all this is that New Dealers feel that Congress can pass laws fixing prices for an industry, as long as it refrains from passing labor provisions or tax penalty provisions. It is apparent that many Administration aims could be achieved through price-fixing alone, inasmuch as wages,
working hours and similar matters
king to a very large extent upon prices. Thus, those who believe in the principles of such measures as the NRA, are going to make their contentments again felt in proposed legislation, and the potentialities
are highly interesting and important.

The Guffey Coal Act has again raised discussion as to just what President Roosevelt would like to do to the Constitution.

As everyone knows, the New Deal's Supreme Court batting average has been very bad. It won in the gold seizure and TVA cases—it lost in all other cases of importance, including the NIRA, the AAA,
and the Railway Pension Act.

The opinion is growing in some quarters that President Roosevelt,
if reelected, may go before the people and ask for an amendment to the Constitution which would either curb the powers of the High Court, or expressly make legal acts which are now illegal. It is thought in other quarters, that the President may prefer to wait until a number of Justices retire—which is forecast for next year—in the belief that he could get a more "liberal"

court through his appointive power.
Little is heard from public officials of such possibilities—they're too
full of political dynamite.

OLD DEFEATS BRIDGTON

Old Academy completed its baseball season with a 13-10 victory over Bridgton High. The game was a real hitting spree on sides with the Gould infield
"ring up" on two occasions.
The stellar outfield played brilliantly with Captain Daniels "turning" two sensational catches and hitting three times out of four to the plate, driving in four and scoring two.

The infield Keddy played exceptionally well, making five assists out an error. In the seventh the locals nearly threw the game away, committing four errors allowing four runs to score on one hit.

Emby was rather unsteady,
in fielding and pitching, but managed to win his third victory with no defeats. Whitman did well in the relief role and the double play which ended
all game.

GOULD DEFEATS BRIDGTON

Gould Academy completed its baseball season with a 12-10 victory over Bridgton High. The team was a real hitting spree on the sides with the Gould infield "turning up" on two occasions. The stellar outfield played brilliantly with Captain Daniels "turning up" two sensational catches and hitting three times out of four to the plate, driving in four runs and scoring two.

The infield Keady played exceptionally well, making five assists without an error. In the seventh inning the locals nearly threw the away, committing four errors allowing four runs to score on one hit.

Quimby was rather unsteady, in fielding and pitching, but managed to win his third victory with no defeats. Whitman pitched well in the relief role and led the double play which ended the game.

GOULD TEAM SCORES 90 RUNS

The nine games played this season by Gould Academy scored 90 runs to the opponents 49. Six games were won and three lost. All three were lost by one run and one of the wins was in a 12-inning game. Gould's 90 runs were scored on 94 hits while the opponents scored 49 runs on 83 hits.

Large instrumental in running the grand total of 90 runs were the sluggers of the Academy who gathered 67 safe hits between them. Eddy Robertson, star baseman, won the batting championship with the exceptional high average of .405 for the season. Captain Daniels followed by with an even .400. Bob Young who held the lead at .424 in the first six games slumped during the last of the season but managed to finish third with a .325 average. Dick Young ranked fourth with a .312 average. He failed to get a hit in the final game which dropped his average from .370 to .312 in the day. Lovejoy, second baseman, hit 300 all year got one hit in six trips to the plate in the final game and ended up in 5th place with an average of .290.

Quimby led the pitchers with three victories to his credit against no defeats. Keniston also had no defeats and gained one victory. He also has done some fine relief hurling. Bob Browne has one victory to his credit against one defeat. Whitman has one victory and two defeats slated up against him. He also has done some fine relief hurling.

The 1936 season has been very successful. The team would have needed only a few small breaks to have won any of the three close battles which were lost by one run. Next year the team will greatly miss Daniels, Browne, Lovejoy, Quimby and Whitman. The others will all be available for another season.

Nun Admitted to Supreme Bar
Washington, D. C.—"Sister Ann Joachim, you may pass to the clerk's desk and take the oath." With these words, Chief Justice Hughes paved the way for the first nun ever admitted to practice before the Supreme Court of the United States. Sister Ann has been a member of the Supreme Court of Michigan for three years, has been a practicing lawyer since 1923, has her own plane and won many tennis trophies before taking orders. She was born 34 years ago in Germany as Petronilla M. Joachim.

Rail Rates Reduced
New York City—This week marks a general reduction of rates on all rates on Pullman cars. Characteristic reductions for coach travel from this city: Chicago, from $22.70 to $18.20; Detroit, from $24.32 to $19.70; Washington, from $3.14 to $2.55. Bus lines promptly met the challenge by adopting new schedules ranging from 1.5 to 1.75 cents per mile.

Pope Is 75 Years Old
Vatican City, Italy—Plainly showing the strain of his years, Pope Pius XI celebrated his 75th anniversary with a special mass at St. Peter's, where he was cheered by 40,000 Catholics, including 10,000 pilgrims from all over the world.

Popular Opera Closes
New York City—The experiment of giving a Spring Season of opera at the Metropolitan Opera House at $3.00 "top" (about half the regular Winter Season price) came to grief at the end of its fourth experimental week. Music lovers found that they had been hearing many of the same singers at $1.00 in other opera companies, and lack of patronage darkened the big house.

Mormons Relieve Their Own
Salt Lake City, Utah—Pledging themselves to eat only one meal the first Sunday of each month, giving the cost of the other two meals to the Church's relief program, 602,000 Mormons of the country undertake to remove 88,000 of their co-religionists from Government relief by October 1st. President Heber J. Grant tells the members of his faith, "If we fail in this we stand condemned."

Quint's Beap Nichea
Callender, Canada—A 100th celebration of the second anniversary of their births, the Dianne quintuplets received a $250,000 contract for three new films featuring their daily activities.

Perennial Optimist Arrives
New York City—After a six weeks' cure at Bad Nauheim, Germany, Charles M. Schwab, veteran steel master and chairman of the Board of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation returned with this message: "I feel that we are headed for better things. I got the impression from Europe of how fundamentally sound we are."

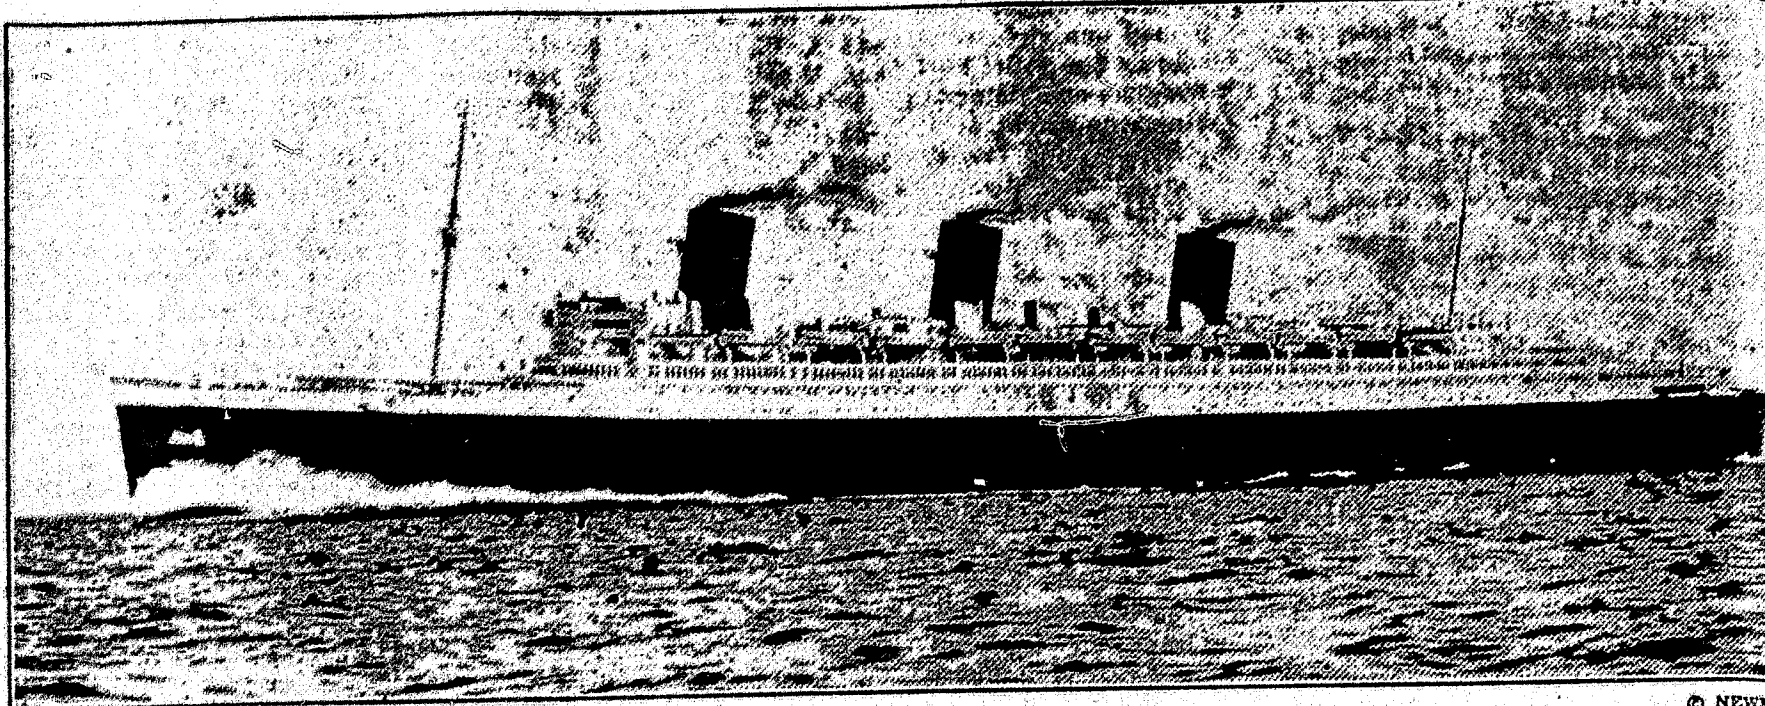

Lindbergh King's Guest
London, England—Among guests at a small dinner party given by King Edward VIII at St. James's Palace were Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh. It was the first time the American couple had been received by the new King.

Cops Reveal Wealth
San Francisco, Cal.—As the city's police hunt down toward its close, residents have discovered some startling facts about the police force who ran his 39 years' sentence of $55,000 up to a tidy $100,000. A prodded lieutenant suddenly remembered that his wife had given him a $10,000 cash dowry 15 years ago. Another bluecoat attributed his $40,000 stake to the uncanny ability of "a small, dark man named Monk" to pick winners for him at the races. At the height of things four city policemen were indicted for robbing a drug store owned by the Police Commissioner himself.

Rich Derby Winner
London, England—The triumph of Mahmud, entry of the Aga Khan, in winning the $50,000 Epsom Derby, again drew attention to the fabulous owner. The income of the Aga Khan is estimated at $1,000,000 a year, contributed by 100,000,000 Moslems who call him their spiritual leader. Every year he is weighed at Bombay, India, and receives his weight in gold.

Completing the voyage from Southampton-Cherbourg in a little over four days, the "Queen Mary," latest addition to the Cunard-White Star Line, was accorded a tumultuous welcome in New York Harbor on her first Western crossing. While her 200,000 horsepower makes her the most powerful ship in the world, she is not the largest, her 1,018 feet being 11 feet less than the length of the French liner "Normandie," which also tops her 73,000 tons by 7,000 tons. The "Queen Mary," however, carries 4,000 passengers, nearly double the capacity of her French rival. She cost $30,000,000 and has eleven decks.

Irish Republic Forseen
Dublin, Ireland—With the end of the Senate of the Irish Free State, President Eamon de Valera promises a new Irish Constitution by Autumn. Finally the Senate was itself abolished, leaving the way clear to a liberalized constitution.

NEW ADMINISTRATION BUILDING, 1934

MARIAN TRUE GEHRING STUDENTS' HOME, 1925

WILLIAM BINGHAM GYMNASIUM, 1921

Staff Increased From One to Fourteen

No public efforts beyond those of the common schools had been made in the town for the cause of education till the Spring of 1835, when the citizens chose a Board of Trustees of the Bethel High School, who furnished a commodious hall, and employed Nathaniel T. True, then a student in Bowdoin College, as Principal. Eighty-six students, nearly all adults, attended the first term. A summer term succeeded, and a Fall term—when there were 91 students, comprising a body of young people remarkable for their studious habits and high moral character. The Trustees were sufficiently encouraged to petition the Legislature, the following Winter, for a Charter to establish an English and Classical Academy.

An act was passed to incorporate Bethel Academy, which was approved by Gov. R. P. Dunlap, Jan. 27, 1836. The names embodied in the act of incorporation were: John Grover, Moses Mason, William Frye, Charles Frost, Jedediah Burbank, John Hastings, Stephen Emery, Barbour Bartlett, James Walker, Levi Whitman, Robbins Brown, Valentine Little, George W. Chapman, Timothy Carter, Phineas Frost, Timothy Hastings, and Robert A. Chapman. The first meeting was held May 2d, 1836, at which time a code of By-laws was adopted. Dr. Timothy Carter was the first president; Dr. John Grover, Vice-President; and William Frye, Esq., Secretary. At this meeting arrangements were made to erect a building, which was accomplished in the summer of 1836.

The academic year consisted of four terms. The first term commenced September, 1836, under the care of Isaac Randall, a graduate of Bowdoin College, who continued in the position two years. He was succeeded by William Chapman, a native of Bethel, who taught one term in the Spring of 1838. He was followed by Joseph Hill, who taught in the Autumn of the same year. Charles M. Blake taught in 1838; Edward P. Weston in 1839; Calvin Chapman in 1840; Moses Soule in 1841-2-3. The school was highly successful during the administration of the latter teacher. He encouraged the students to set out a row of elms around the lot. He was followed by Moses B. Bartlett, Abernethy Grover, Amanda Barker, D. R. Hastings, Talleyrand Grover, Joseph Pickard and William Hurd. N. T. True took charge of the Academy in the Spring of 1848, and continued in the school until the Autumn of 1861—a period of thirteen years. The school was large, and many young men fitted for college and business pursuits.

About the year 1842 the Rev. Daniel Gould, the first settled minister in the town, made a bequest to the Academy on condition that it should be named after him. Accordingly its name was changed to Gould's Academy. About $1,000 was realized from his estate. In 1850 the Trustees obtained a half township of land from the Legislature, which they sold for $2,500.

Following Dr. True were Wellington R. Cross, E. P. Morse, M. C. Fernald, B. P. Snow, W. P. Young, George T. Sumner, G. M. Bodge, C. H. Hersey, S. A. Thurlow, D. O. S. Lowell, E. H. Hall, D. M. McPherson, J. M. Fluke, D. T. Timberlake, H. W. Johnson, Albert F. Sweetair, W. R. Howard, A. C. Dresser, Arthur D. Hall, J. D. Merriman, Edgar M. Simpson, and Fred O. Small.

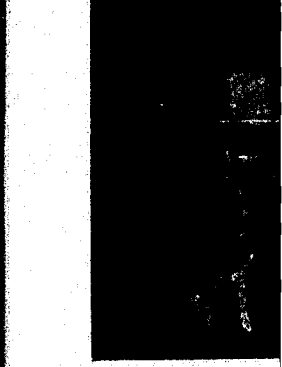

Frank E. Hanscom, Ed. D. The present principal, Frank E. Hanscom, came to the Academy in 1897. The history and success of the school since that time is a matter of familiar history. At the beginning of his administration the attendance had reached a low point of about 25 students; within a few years under his effort the attendance equalled the records attained during the principalship of Dr. N. T. True years before.

MAINE SOIL ACT PAYMENT
RATES TOP U. S. AVERAGE

The average rate of soil conserving, or Class I, payments in Oxford County under the 1936 agricultural conservation program will be $14.00 an acre, A. J. Beck of Washburn, chairman of the state agricultural conservation committee has announced. The rate for each individual farm will depend on the productivity of the farm compared with the average productivity of all farms in the county.

Soil conserving payments will be made this year to farmers who divert some of their acreage of soil depleting to soil conserving crops. Mr. Beck points out that farmers who elect to do this will receive the soil conserving rate for their farms for each acre diverted, up to 15% of their soil depleting base acreage. For the whole country, the average county rate of the soil conserving payment is ten dollars an acre.

The county rate for diverting soil depleting crops, he said, was based on the productivity of all farms of the county, taking into account average yields of the principle soil depleting crops over a period of years. Rates of the soil building, or Class II, payments have already been announced.

CHAPTER IX

BARRY'S panic was short-lived. Between him and the sailing but had come a vision of Peggy, with beaded lashes screening eyes forever staring at nothing.

"I can't do it," he said to himself. "I can't run away and leave that girl in the lurch. Nor Pat either. I've twisted this job, and I've got to go through with it."

"Anyway, it begins to look as though the end were in sight. If Ridder sails Sunday—"

He went back to the shipping news.

"If Ridder sails Sunday, that's the Bremen and she's due here the following Saturday. That gives us eight days. I'd better see Winslow."

He called Peter next morning, but the attorney was out in the country. "Left last night," his secretary reported, "and won't be back until Monday."

Barry had a dinner engagement at Southampton. "We'll start things humming on Monday," Barry told himself. "I've got my house to put in order, too. Ridder's house, that is."

Evans telephoned around ten, and before noon they were on their way to Southampton. "My last weekend with Pat," he was thinking. "Where'll I be next Saturday? Out of luck, and out of a job. In jail, maybe, and in the newspapers. That's my finish with—everybody."

There was a new atmosphere at the Hamblidge's. Pat had been right in telling Jack that he'd "cheer my father up a lot." "They're building a railway on the beach," she laughed, when the boy—annoyed, and active—joined them before dinner.

"You must go to bed now," Pat bade him, "if we're to take our ride in the morning. You have a canter every day before breakfast," she added to Barry, ringing for a maid to take charge of the youngster. "I discovered the dearest little pony in the village, and the man brings it over at nine o'clock, with another horse for me. Jack's getting to be a regular Buffalo Bill."

The strained expression of a week ago was beginning to disappear from the face of Judge Hamblidge. But the greatest difference was to the boy's mother. Naturally sensitive, as Harry had remarked, she had been quick to detect and emphasize Pat's malice with more up. Her eyes, too, had lost all the ornamental and distant reference to "kiss" and "kisses." She had stopped staring into space. "Was the news about Jack?" she asked quite calmly.

"Yes, just back," Barry declared vigorously.

At the dinner table, in spite of herself, Peg caught some of the reaction of Harry's new confidence. Nolan's story sounded like the collection of everything they owned. "We've got to get Jack out before Saturday," Harry said. "How to handle him, that's the question."

Harry looked up at him.

"What's happened to you?" Peggy asked.

"I'm not sure," Barry replied. "I'm not sure."

"I'm not sure," Barry replied. "I'm not sure."

"I'm not sure," Barry replied. "I'm not sure."

"I'm not sure," Barry replied. "I'm not sure."

"I'm not sure," Barry replied. "I'm not sure."

"That's true," Hamblidge admitted. "But Nolan was drunk last night, you say. And some parts of his story simply don't hold water. I don't believe there was anything queer between Mrs. Kelly and the Filipino. Kelly's finding that out wouldn't account for his calling the man a 'lousy spy,' would it?"

"No," Barry retorted. "But listen. If the Chink was a 'lousy spy,' he got paid for it, didn't he? Wouldn't that explain Mrs. Kelly's giving him 'coin and jewelry'? And everything else? The Chink's reporting Betty Barclay's message, and all the rest of it? I tell you, this story's as straight as a string. Betty Barclay went on the road with her show about the time Mrs. Kelly sued for divorce. I found that out some time ago. She got back the day of the murder, and phoned Kelly. Mrs. Kelly learned of that from the Chink, and lit into Mike. Then Mike lit into the Chink, and the Chink killed him. I think we can prove that."

The Judge shook his head.

"Anyway, it certainly establishes reasonable doubt of Jack's guilt."

"They can't convict Jack," the Judge insisted. "Peter says so, and I've never known Peter to be wrong when he made an assertion like that. But acquired means a title for the trial, and Jack will still be in jail when his father returns."

Pat remained silent, but the next morning, on the beach, she drove Barry away from the little group engaged in railroad construction.

"You were right in the beginning," Pat said. "There was only one thing to do. Father saw Kelly alive after Peg's husband left him, and we should have said so."

"I can't stand seeing Peggy," Pat continued. "Was that what you had in mind when you sent her here? Anyway, it's too terrible. She comes down to breakfast, looking—well, you know. You knew about trouble like that—all night long—alone—and I didn't. I do now, and we've got to 'come clean.'"

"I don't think it matters," Barry replied. "I still think we can free Jack without that."

"How soon?"

"By next Wednesday," Pat nodded.

"All right," she said. "We'll wait until Wednesday."

Harry had never seen her more charming.

As they walked down the beach, to rejoin the others, he asked, "Are you ever going to confess how you found out about me?"

Pat laughed.

"That was too easy. The night of Marian's visit, you told me you'd taken the name of Barry Gilbert. And it had a curiously familiar sound. After a moment, I remembered that I'd once seen an actor called Barry Gilbert in a war picture."

"And then?"

"Then you shut your hand in the door. The expression of inhibited surprise and pain in your face—that was what had kept the picture and the actor in my mind. You were the man who'd come out of the drinking place, laughing and talking, and here that. I was sure of that. Just as sure as I was that"

"I'm glad you found out," Barry said.

"I'm glad you found out," Barry said.

"I'm glad you found out," Barry said.

"I'm glad you found out," Barry said.

"I'm glad you found out," Barry said.

supposed to be, you couldn't play a violin any more than you could play Hamlet."

"I'm glad you found out," Barry said. "I'm glad I haven't been deceiving you, at all events."

They had reached the railroad builders.

"Pat!" Jack called. "Pat! We've finished—"

"Jack! You mustn't call Miss Hamblidge 'Pat.'"

"Everybody else does."

"I like it," Patricia came to the rescue. "We're Pat and Peg to each other now; why shouldn't I be Pat to Jack?"

It was almost a miracle, Barry decided. Was this the same girl of whom, only a couple of months ago, her father had said, "Pat, for short, though it takes courage to call her that?"

The change wasn't all his doing, or Peg's. Something else had contributed to softening Pat, and making her sweeter and lovelier. It was ironic, Barry felt, and bitter—that she should be the loveliest when he was losing her. What of his plan to come back for her—

"Some day, when I've made good?" A girl like that might marry an ex-convict; she certainly couldn't marry an ex-convict.

Barry drove back to town Sunday evening without having put anybody's house in order. He had dined with the Hamblidges, and gone over there in the morning "to see Jack start for his ride."

"Well, our trial's set for two weeks from today," said Winslow when Barry called at his office Monday morning.

"I'm still hoping there won't be any trial."

"Meaning that you think you've got Mrs. Kelly?"

That was the question Barry had dreaded. Winslow's frank amusement at his "sleuthing" nettled him, and made him feel foolish. Especially now that he was compelled to admit, "No; I'm afraid you were right about Mrs. Kelly. She slept at her sister's that night."

"Well, then," Peter asked, "who's the latest candidate?"

"Do you remember reading me your cross examination of the Filipino?"

"A few notes for it—yes."

"You found a lot of holes in the boy's story?"

"Yes."

But Peter was still amused.

"Well, I've got a few more," Barry said, "and a motive."

He sat down, and Peter opposite him. Barry repeated what Evans had told him of the dinner with Nolan.

"Well," Peter remarked at the end, "that settles the case against Rogers."

"You think so?"

"Obviously. If Nolan sticks to his story. We say Nolan's testimony establishes that the decanter was downstairs all the time Rogers was upstairs. But we've got to make the jury believe it."

"Or the district attorney?"

Winslow shook his head.

"The district attorney wouldn't move for dismissal of an indictment on that evidence."

the row—at the time of the murder.

"Luis always came to me when he was in trouble. And he called me, at home, just after one that morning, to say that one of his girls was in jail, and would I take the case. I could hear that jazz of his."

Barry stooped for the glove.

"Well, that's that," he remarked. "Kelly was threatening Morano, you know, and—"

But Peter was smiling again.

"You can make a case against almost anyone," he said. "But a case that'll stand up—that's another thing."

Barry grinned sheepishly.

Winslow pressed a button.

"Stop worrying," he advised Barry. "We're going to free Rogers. If we have to get the guilty man to do it, we'll get him, but let's give the court a chance first."

"I guess we'll have to," Barry conceded.

Peter's secretary opened the door.

"What's Nolan's first name?"

Peter asked Barry. "And where's his garage? Got it, Miss Clark? Got it, Miss Clark? Now, get Nolan in here this afternoon."

He looked up at Barry.

"Don't mind my joking," he said. "Something tells me you did a grand job when you turned up Mr. Nolan."

"Peter's wonderfully kind," Barry told Harwood that evening, "but he makes me feel as small as an author's name in a motion picture advertisement."

"I don't think Winslow means to make anyone feel small," Eric answered. "He's too big for that. It's the small men who've got to make other people smaller, in self-defense. The trouble with Winslow is that he's generally right, and that's trying, no matter how kind anyone may be about it."

"Winslow's a great lawyer," he went on, "and a swell guy. He's had his own troubles, too. Ever meet his wife?"

"Once."

"He's nearly wrecked his career for her, you know. She ran away from home with some youngster in a military school. The kid turned crook, and the cops killed him. Then she married Winslow. The tabloids played the story up all over the place, and Mrs. Winslow crashed, and had to be taken to Europe. She went to pieces again two or three years ago, and Winslow closed the office, and went to live in the South of France. The money gave out, I guess. Anyway, they didn't stay long. Of course, that telephone message doesn't prove anything."

"You mean Morano's message to Winslow?"

"Yes. Luis might have sent that at one o'clock, and still've been in time for the murder."

"Is there any chance that Luis didn't send it?"

"Why do you ask that?"

"It occurs to me that Peter might be shielding some one."

"Whom? Morano?" Harwood shook his head. "Winslow isn't that kind of a lawyer. As a matter of fact, I know Morano phoned him."

"Who told you?"

"Violet Fane."

"Then you've been to the Coconut Bar?"

"Yes, I went Saturday, and met all your cronies. Miss Fane says Luis followed Peggy Rogers around to the police station, and then came back to the Bar, and called up his lawyer, and drove to Morristown."

"At one o'clock?"

"Yes."

"How about 'faking an alibi'?"

"You reminded me it could be done," Barry went on.

Eric turned suddenly.

"Ever strike you as queer," he asked, "that nobody ever connected Kelly's murder with the Jefferson Street grab?"

Barry couldn't trust himself to reply.

"They were pulled off about the same time. As I remember it, Judge Hamblidge's decision was handed down the day after the killing."

Barry remained silent.

"Kelly stood to make a million or two on that deal," Harwood continued. "Those Jefferson Street houses were pretty decent once. Then they went slummy. Through agents, Kelly bought 'em in, one by one, for little or nothing, and turned 'em over to a phony corporation to sell to the city at a huge profit. Some of the original owners may have been a little bit sore, don't you think?"

The conversation was drifting into safer channels, and, relieved, Barry let it flow on.

"As a matter of fact," Harwood resumed, "some one was—very sore. He called me up, the day of the murder, and offered to squeal. He wouldn't give me his name, but he said he'd be here, at ten-thirty that night, to deliver the goods on Kelly."

"And then?"

"Then he didn't show up."

"Somebody got to him."

"Probably. And then somebody killed Kelly."

Barry asked, "Is that the clue you had in mind when you said, 'Tell Winslow I may have a tip for him some day?'"

Harwood nodded.

"Yes, but, as I remarked later, that guy who phoned might have been anybody. I didn't have a darn thing to go on except that he had a soft voice and a funny impediment in his speech."

"And then—"

"Then you told me about Morano, and I went to the Coconut Bar. The guy that phoned me was Morano, all right. But what does that mean? Not a thing, maybe. If Morano did hop in his car at one o'clock that night—"

He paused.

"I've got a dozen men on this trail. Now, I'm going to send somebody to Morristown. Not you. They know you. Your job is to lay low. Morano hasn't the faintest idea who I am. I told him I came from Grand Rapids. But—"

The city editor was pacing the floor.

"My God, how this picture begins fitting together," he cried. "Morano threatens to spill the beans. Some one tells Kelly. Kelly goes to the Coconut Bar. With two strong-arm men. Why? To silence a squealer. That was around eight o'clock, and, at ten-thirty, the squealer didn't squeal. Why? Because Kelly had something on him."

Barry was on his feet, too, now.

"Something in writing," he said. "Sure! The paper he accused Peggy Rogers of trying to steal."

"Yes," Barry went on, "and get this: somebody did try. Violet Fane, probably. Peggy Rogers says Violet had just left the table when the row started. And that Luis was talking to Vi, outside the dressing rooms, just before that."

"What did he say? He said, 'I'll send this dame to jail, and you to the hot spot.' And you can't send a man to the electric chair for picking pockets."

"No."

"But you might, if you knew of something else he'd done, and had the proof of it. There was a paper, and it had disappeared when the body was found. Who got it? Morano. And not in the Coconut Bar, because it was still in Kelly's pocket at midnight."

Harwood laid down his pipe.

"How do you know that?"

"Somebody told me."

"Jack Rogers?"

"No."

Harwood's eyes narrowed.

"Was it Judge Hamblidge?"

Barry didn't answer.

"If Winslow's shielding anyone it's Judge Hamblidge," Harwood said. "Judge Hamblidge, or some one close to him. I've been thinking that ever since you put the idea in my head. The judge has always been a straight shooter. Why did he write that decision? Was that paper a threat to him, too?"

Barry said, "I don't know."

"I don't either. But I'm going to find out before Saturday."

"Can I help?"

Eric looked at him.

"No," he replied, curtly. "For the present, I want you to keep out of this."

JOHN B. PAYSON FOR CONGRESS

REPUBLICAN PRIMARIES, JUNE 15, 1936

Here is the vigor of youth, combined with the sane, sound and experienced business judgment of middle age. On a clean platform—of business-like and humane service—he is out to win. He asks your support. Not on a basis of soft promises. Not with honeyed pledges that delude some of the people. He asks your support on a straightforward, honest platform: "For a business-like government, NOT government in business."
